

BOCA RATON, FLA – IMPERX responds to Sony's announcement regarding discontinuance of the Sony line of CCD image sensors.

Sony has announced that they will be discontinuing production of all CCD image sensors over the next five years. This will impact twelve models of the IMPERX CCD camera series (see list below). IMPERX, in association with our supply chain partners, has plans to manage the available supply of Sony CCD sensors used in our products during, and beyond, this five year phase out period. In addition IMPERX already has a robust line of cameras using CCD image sensors from On-Semi and is already developing new CCD and CMOS options to serve the needs of our customers.

Sony's announced end-of-life plan for their CCD sensors is as follows:

- Last-time buy orders: August 2015
- Wafer production discontinued: March 2017
- Sensor delivery/shipment ends: March 2020

IMPERX will share with our market any critical updates regarding the Sony sensor discontinuance. Watch our website, imperx.com, for further developments and for exciting new product announcements.
